	For this Introduction to Statistics course (PSY 230), I took full responsibility for preparing and presenting lectures, constructing course handouts, overheads, cooperative learning exercises, homework, and exams. Also, I shared the responsibility of grading homework and exams with a graduate student teaching assistant, and held office hours for student consultation.

	During this time I served as co-instructor for Multiple Correlation and Regression (PSY 529), Analysis of Variance (PSY 530), and Intermediate Statistics: Analysis of Variance (PSY 330). In each of these classes, I was responsible for the computer lab portion of the seminars. Specifically, I delivered lectures on the use of the Statistical Package for Social Sciences (SPSS), distributed handouts relevant to each lecture, held office hours for students who desired further elaboration of analyses, computer programming, interpretation of computer output, and graded homework and exams. Additionally, for the graduate level statistics courses (PSY 529, PSY 530), I held test review sessions for interested students.
